EPISODIC BREAKDOWN

1. Deadly Crossings: American Intersections

Today there are some 600 million vehicles worldwide, leading to 700,000 crashes, and 10,000 are fatal at intersections around the world every year. We explore how this increase in automobiles, combined with driver aggression, road design and human error, create some of America's most dangerous intersections. What makes intersections so deadly – and are some more deadly than others?

2. Luxury on the High Seas

We go inside two of the most extravagant and expensive cruise ships in the world, the Silver Shadow and the Paul Gauguin, and see things that even their well-heeled passengers don't get to see. We won't just show you the unsurpassed sophistication, guaranteed to please even the most imperial tastes, we'll show you exactly how the ships' creators and crew make it all happen.

3. Freak Shows

Step right up: it's the strangest show on Earth. Gone are the seedy sideshows filled with physical oddities and made-to-order monsters – these are the freaks of old. Welcome to the twenty-first century. Freak Shows is an exhibit that goes beyond Siamese twins and bearded ladies and takes you on an outrageous odyssey of the bizarre.

4. Shock Therapy: The Last Resort

Delve into the controversial world of electroshock therapy, a psychiatric tool used to combat depression that supporters call psychiatry's magic pill and opponents label state-sanctioned torture. Last year alone, over 100,000 people underwent electroshock therapy, and that number is on the rise.

5. Atlantis: The Ultimate Resort

Located on Paradise Island, the Bahamas, Atlantis is the world's largest island resort. Everything about it is colossal. It covers 600 of the island's 800 acres and it employs 6,000 people. It features a 34-acre marine habitat, 11 swimming areas, a 100, 000ft sq casino, a $15m marina, and a replica of a Mayan temple that's outfitted with five waterslides.
